Outlook

- The Covid-19 pandemic is still creating uncertainty surrounding developments in both Norway and the global economy. However, the uncertainty has been significantly reduced, including because several vaccines have now been approved. The Norwegian state is particularly well-equipped to contribute economically. Extensive measures aimed at both the retail and corporate sector has been effectuated, but lower levels of investment and demand for loans for corporates are expected.
- Norges Bank has cut its policy rate by 1.50 percentage points to 0.0%. The policy rate is expected to increase from 2022.
- SpareBank 1 SR-Bank's long-term target is a minimum return on equity of 12%, but as a consequence of the Covid-19 outbreak, target for 2021 is set to 11%.
- SpareBank 1 SR-Bank's focus on digitalization and automation has enabled almost all of the group's employees to work from home office. Customers have been looked after in an efficient and satisfactory manner.
- Geographic expansion, digitalization and growth will transform SpareBank 1 SR-Bank from a regional savings bank to a bank for the whole of Southern Norway.

Petroleum activity in Norway somewhat lower in 2020

Uncertainty was high after Covid-19, but have decreased due to support package in June 2020 and more stable prices

- Overall activity on the Norwegian Continental Shelf (NCS) increased by 60% from 2007 to 2014.
- Activity fell markedly in 2015-17 due to lower prices and rebounded in 2019.
- At the beginning of 2020, some increase in petroleum activity was expected in 2020. Covid-19 led to lower prices and increased uncertainty, but the support package in June 2020 and more stable prices support activity. NPD expects somewhat lower activity in 2021, but more stable outlook in 2022-2024.
